

Rebecca C. Leng

Ms. Rebecca Leng is the Deputy Assistant Inspector General for Information Technology and Computer Security in the Office of Inspector General of the U.S. Department of Transportation. The Department of Transportation is responsible for one of the largest IT investment portfolios among U.S. civilian agencies, which includes air traffic control systems, safety inspection systems, and financial management systems supporting distribution of billions of dollars of Federal grants.

In her current position, she oversees audits and reviews of existing or proposed IT systems and computer security throughout the Department of Transportation. She is also regularly called upon for testimony preparation before the Congress on departmental IT issues. In 2002, she was selected to represent the Inspector General community in the Executive Branch Information Systems Security Committee reporting to the President's Critical Infrastructure Protection Board.

She joined the U.S. Department of Transportation in 1991. Prior to that, she worked for private companies and an accounting firm. She received her master's degree from the Ohio State University and her baccalaureate's degree from the National Taiwan University. She is a Certified Public Accountant (CPA) and a Certified Information Systems Auditor (CISA).

Ms. Leng resides in Maryland with her husband and their son.
